Northern Ireland - effectively dispelled from the UK!

Here is a most important article, based upon a speech in the Stormont Assembly by Mr. Jim Allister, TUV leader, on Wednesday 30th December, 2020.

It brings out the betrayal of our heritage of which the DUP are guilty by their nefarious kowtowing to Boris Johnston and their surrender of a proper establishing of the border between Northern Ireland and the EU along the legal and historic border separating Northern Ireland from the Irish Republic.

They joined with republicans in not wanting a 'hard border' and this at the behest of greedy businessmen who balked at the possibility of increased expenses which the establishing of the legitimate border might mean. Added to this, the DUP supported the cries of the Irish republicans against an establishing of the traditional border as the line of demarkation because it would set back their plans to remove that border and thus further their aim of a United Ireland.

As a result, we are effectively part of the Irish Republic as far as EU law and trade is concerned. Boris Johnston was quite happy to sacrifice Northern Ireland despite his public undertaking, made at a DUP conference 2 years ago, to safeguard our place in the United Kingdom. He said: "No British government could or should sign up to putting a border in the Irish Sea between mainland United Kingdom and Northern Ireland." Less than one year later Mr. Johnson put a border in the Irish Sea.

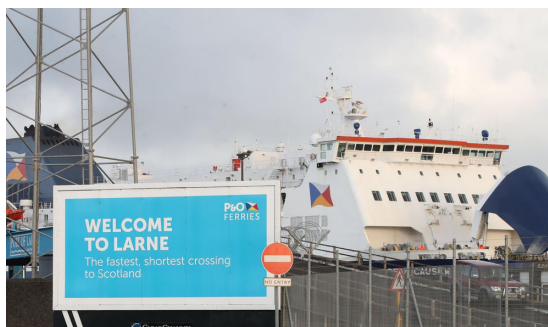

We are in the hands of treacherous, deceitful people who care nothing for the promises and solemn undertakings they have made.

"But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death," Revelation 21:8.

Jim Allister: I say to DUP — as the lead unionist party you must thwart the Northern Ireland protocol

Larne Port is now a border post. The Irish Sea frontier is a betrayal yet a DUP minister is building the infrastructure

Today is January 1, which is 220 years from the activation of the Act of Union.

Article 6 of the Act of Union was the fundamental building block and foundation of the Union. It was to the effect that there would be free and frictionless trade across and within the entirety of the United Kingdom, from which every citizen could benefit.

Sadly, on this January 1, article 6 of the Act of Union will be trashed by the protocol, which creates friction in trade within the United Kingdom and causes the creation of an Irish Sea border to aid that friction.

Of course, that brings with it the odious imposition of laws that we never made, that we cannot change and that will be supervised by a foreign court in a foreign jurisdiction.

Make no mistake about it: the protocol is a dire consequence for every citizen in Northern Ireland.

We will all live through its dire consequences. Therefore, we have to ask the question of how it arose.

Well, the truth is that it arose because nationalism, aided by their little helpers in the Alliance Party and some useful idiots in commerce, so balked at the very thought of an extra camera on the land border that they pushed the border to the Irish Sea.

Some — Doug Beattie used the word in this week's Stormont debate on the Brexit deal — will now "salivate" at the consequences. They do not care about the consequences for the people of Northern Ireland.

Rather, they see it as an advance towards partitioning the United Kingdom and unifying the island of Ireland economically. That is why they salivate, but it is the people of Northern Ireland who will suffer immensely in consequence of that.

That congregation will be those who will wring their hands, lament and pretend that they are upset that their citizens cannot readily access goods through Amazon or any of the other suppliers or that their companies cannot readily import.

They will say, "How terrible", but they are the originators.

It is they, who egged it on in Stormont and who had to see it done and who will now impose that price on us all.

My other sadness about this is that the DUP is a party that knows the issues, although the Irish Sea border is the product of the betrayal of Brexit.

Let me say, this is not the Brexit that I voted for. My ballot paper did not ask, "Do you want GB to leave the EU and leave Northern Ireland behind, abandoned in the EU's customs union, single market and VAT regime?".

No, it invited me to vote to leave as we joined, as one nation. One of my great sadnesses is that, although the Irish Sea border is being delivered by the betrayal of Brexit, it is a DUP minister who is building the infrastructure.

Although the DUP in Westminster this week voted in principle and correctly against the deal, in Stormont it has been voting to implement the protocol.

I say this to the DUP, pretty directly: there is a huge onus upon you to ensure that the ambition of this protocol, of building an all-Ireland economy, is thwarted at every turn.

You have heard it this week; that is the ambition.

It is self-evident; it always was the price for Europe to sacrifice Northern Ireland.

As the lead party of unionism in the government, the burden upon you is immense to make sure that, at every turn, in every small and every large measure you utterly thwart the building of an all-Ireland economy, because you know and I know what the next step is.
