Gerry Adams sentences himself to exile!!

Gerry Adams

At least that is what he should do if a recent speech he made contains even just a grain of truth. Sadly, we in Northern Ireland know all too well that truth in the statements of Gerry Adams is as scarce as teeth in a hen!

In a recent speech reported in the press, Adams, present member of the IRA "Army Council" and former IRA leader, said that there was "No room for bigots in the new society." Due to Gerry's definition of "bigots" being different from that contained in every dictionary ever printed, he does not see himself as such and so believes that he has plenty of room here. "Racism, sectarianism, bigotry and intolerance have no place in the new society we are trying to build in Northern Ireland", Sinn Fein president Gerry Adams has declared. He went on: "The issue of children's rights or the lack of them has been highlighted by the blockade of Holy Cross School."

Of course they were highlighted a long time ago and much more cruelly when Mr Adams' IRA organisation bombed school buses and shot bus drivers at the wheel of their vehicles and murdered fathers taking their children to school. Sadly, Tony Blair, David Trimble and Bertie Ahern have agreed that there is room in Northern Ireland for such as carry out those acts.
