

The Burning Bush—Online article archive

IRA murders one of its own

Eamon Collins was a self-confessed IRA murderer who turned supergrass and died the inevitable death of such, at the hands of his former compatriots. He was found battered and stabbed not far from his Newry home. Everyone sees it as the work of the IRA, who have not denied it. Everyone that is but the Chief Constable 'Sir' Ronnie Flanagan. He says that he is not sure. What he really is doing is paying for his recent knighthood by protecting the so-called "Peace Agreement" in vainly trying to conceal from the public that the IRA has yet again flagrantly breached its terms.

Only a few family friends attended the funeral. None of the neighbours of the murdered man attended.