

The Burning Bush—Online article archive

The Lies and Deceit of Tony Blair

Tony Blair visiting troops in Iraq

For decades, the unionist people of Ulster have endured an unremitting campaign of lies and deceit from their government in London and its lackeys here in Northern Ireland. Every political development over the last 25 years has been eased into place by the grease of political dishonesty. The present scenario with Sinn Fein and the IRA in a position of political dominance, presiding over the demise of democracy in this land, is founded upon a platform of murder and terror on the part of Sinn Fein/IRA and lying and political bullying on the part of the Westminster administrators. The complaints of the Ulster people regarding this evil regime have, of course, fallen on deaf ears. While some mainland members of parliament have had sufficient integrity to voice some concern about the matter, few ever felt it of such importance as to campaign against it. The party whip usually cowed the conscience of any concerned party members, be they Conservative or Labour.

Now a time of reaping has come and those citizens in mainland Britain and their representatives, who meekly watched their fellow citizens in Northern Ireland have their lives governed and their rights and liberties destroyed under a scheme of legislative lying, are tasting something of that bitter cup for themselves. The war in Iraq, Parliament was told by Tony Blair and his cronies, was absolutely necessary to stop Saddam Hussein using the “weapons of mass destruction” that he possessed. Despite the scepticism of many in the Labour party about the “evidence” of the existence of such weapons, Tony Blair won his final vote and the war has taken place.

No weapons found

The British and US forces now completely control Iraq, but there is still no evidence of the weapons, the existence of which was the sole justification for the war. So far, coalition troops have searched all but two of 19 suspected sites on their priority list, to no avail. No finds have emerged from searches of 45 of 68 sites thought to offer clues for banned weapons. Three mobile laboratories have been found, but none contained chemical or biological weapons.

The failure of coalition forces to find weapons of mass destruction in Iraq questions Tony Blair’s case for war, says former cabinet minister, Robin Cook. Mr Cook, who resigned as Commons leader on the eve of war, referred to the weapons of Saddam Hussein as the “fabled” weapons. Donald Rumsfeld, US Secretary of Defence, has recently suggested that the weapons were all destroyed before the war!! He said this may explain why such weapons were not used against coalition forces during the recent conflict. For many Labour MPs, the truth that they were deliberately deceived by their leader is bitter. Mr. Colin Challen, who joined the rebels in the first Iraq war vote in Parliament, but abstained on the final vote, is one of the Labour backbenchers now doubting the basis for war. Mr Challen told the BBC 'Today' programme: "By now we would have expected to have seen a lot more evidence but the evidence has been so scant as to be almost non-existent." "It was not on the basis of finding some clapped out old chemical mobile laboratory that we were prepared to send our forces into battle." Let us welcome Mr Challen and his friends to the world of real politics in modern Britain!

The Burning Bush—Online article archive

EU

A new, and even more important issue will soon be before the British Parliament. It is that of a new "Constitution for the European Union." The British people are being taken into a political monolith which will swallow up their national identity and remove the sovereignty of our parliament. The United Kingdom will become little more than a province in a European superstate. This is planned by Tony Blair without the people of the United Kingdom being given an opportunity to have a direct say in the matter, by way of a referendum. He has said that there is no case for a national vote on the matter. We will be required once again to accept and rely upon the assurances of Tony "the liar" Blair!

Bible

For those who read the Bible and rightly divide the Word of Truth, the developments on this matter of the United Kingdom's involvement with a powerful European superstate, come as no surprise. The kingdom of Antichrist, as prophesied of old, will be one centred upon the Mediterranean region and finally based in Iraq. It is a kingdom that will emerge out of the very political 'wheeling and dealing' that have marked the United Kingdom's involvement in Iraq at present and which currently feature in the debate on the new constitution for Europe. Daniel tells us of this kingdom. "And in his estate shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries," Daniel 11:21. The word "flatteries" means "slipperiness, fine promises, smoothness".

Political life has always been renowned for its art of deceitfulness, but it is reaching new depths in Tony Blair and he is but leading us on to its final and full manifestation under Antichrist.