The Murderous Madness of Modern Morality

The Bible says: "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter! Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight!" Isaiah 5:20-21.

Such a philosophy has taken control of the national thinking here in the United Kingdom. Laws, contrary to God's Law, are passed and accepted by the majority almost without question.

IT IS NOW UNLAWFUL TO PROPERLY DISCIPLINE YOUR CHILD BUT LAWFUL TO MURDER IT IN THE WOMB!

Here are two examples of this abominable lunacy!

It was reported recently that Scotland has banned the use of physical punishment of children.

The Bible has this to say on the subject.

"Withhold not correction from the child: for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die. Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell," Proverbs 23:13-14.

"The rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame," Proverbs 29:15.

We could add many more but perhaps we might just show that God, "Who is love," (1 John 4:8), believes in physically punishing His children when they sin.

"And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him: for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons. Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live? For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness. Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby," Hebrews 12:5-11.

The fruit of this folly can only be even greater rebellion and defiance amongst the young and misery and shame brought to more witless parents!

Here, in Northern Ireland, as result of new abortion laws being imposed upon us from Westminster, it is estimated that 6500 babies will be aborted per year as a result of the new legislation.

This fact became evident when the notes taken at a meeting of Northern Ireland's Health and Social Care Board held ~~last December were examined by news reporters.~~

Scotland becomes first part of UK to ban smacking

Published on BBC news site November 6th, 2020.

Scotland's ban on parents smacking their children has become law, making it the first part of the UK to outlaw physical punishment of under-16s.

Parents and carers were previously allowed to use physical force to discipline their children if it was considered "reasonable chastisement".

Backers of the bill rallied outside Holyrood on the morning of the vote

The new law means that the so-called "justifiable assault" defence is no longer available.

It seeks to give children the same protection from assault as adults.

Sweden was the first country in the world to ban smacking in the home when it outlawed corporal punishment in 1979. Scotland has now become the 58th to do so.

In January, Wales was the second part of the UK to pass a law banning people from smacking their children. It will begin in 2022.

There are not currently any plans for England or Northern Ireland to follow suit.

Children's charity the NSPCC said Scotland's ban was a "common sense" move.

The charity's Joanna Barrett said: "This law sets out in clear terms that physical punishment should no longer be part of childhood in Scotland and it marks a momentous step in making it a country where children's rights are truly recognised, respected and fulfilled."

'Violence is never acceptable'

The smacking ban bill was introduced to the Scottish Parliament by Scottish Greens MSP John Finnie, a former police officer, who won the support of the SNP, Labour and Lib Dems as well as his own party and many children's charities.

Mr Finnie said smacking teaches children that "might is right", and that the ban would "send a strong message that violence is never acceptable in any setting".

Children's Minister Maree Todd said: "This outdated defence has no place in a modern Scotland. It can never be reasonable to strike a child."

Opponents argued the changes were "unnecessary" as existing laws already protected children from abuse at the hands of adults.

They said the changes would do nothing to help vulnerable children who were the victims of serious physical abuse, but could cause traumatic interventions in "good" families, who use discipline such as a smack on the bottom.

Health officials discuss possible 6,500 abortions per year in Northern Ireland

Northern Ireland's health authorities have discussed the idea that abortions in the Province could reach 6,500 per year, now that the law has been relaxed.

The figure is found in the notes of a meeting involving officials from Northern Ireland's Health and Social Care Board held last December.

It would be equivalent to roughly three months' worth of births in Northern Ireland – although the Department of Health has stressed this is just an "extreme" scenario.

The meeting took place just a couple of months after abortion was decriminalised in NI (but before the new abortion framework was drawn up in spring allowing, in theory, for abortion up to birth).

The meeting notes were obtained via a Freedom of Information request from anti-abortion group the Centre for Bioethical Reform (CBR).

They relate to a discussion among health officials about how many abortions they would need to cater for in NI.

The document says initial estimates are based on "a working assumption that the 1,053 women (believed to be an underrepresentation) who travelled to England in 2018 would have stayed if accessible and confidential service was available here".

The notes add: "Service needs to be scaleable (if service take-up reaches Scotland levels could mean 4,500 terminations per year in NI. If we reach England and Wales levels that figure could be 6,500)."

Every quarter in Northern Ireland, there are roughly between 5,000 and 6,000 births – making for a total of around 22,500 last year.

Based on the number of women who go to England and Wales for abortions, the News Letter calculates that around 4.3% of NI pregnancies result in abortion.

This is undoubtedly an underestimate though, because some women will have had abortions in Scotland – plus many others will take abortion pills at home; so obviously do not show up in official records.

In England and Wales abortion rates are now at their highest since the Abortion Act was passed in 1967.

There were 209,519 terminations in 2019, meaning just under 25% of all pregnancies ended in abortion.

Questioned about the idea of 6,500 annual abortions taking place in Northern Ireland, the Department of Health said: "The figure quoted is not a prediction. "The document clearly states the initial planning assumption to be around 1,000 terminations each year.

"The figures queried are extreme planning assumptions to illustrate that a full service would have to be scalable."

Meanwhile, Alliance for Choice, a group which lobbies in favour of access to abortion, said: "It is a fact that globally, one in four pregnancies will end in termination and NI is no exception in that regard.

"What is critical is that women and pregnant people get full access to the abortion healthcare they require at the point of need without any form of obstruction and in a social climate that is free from abortion stigma...

"What is actually an 'extreme scenario' is the fact that despite a regulatory framework for abortion now existing in Northern Ireland, too many women and pregnant people are being forced to travel within Northern Ireland and some to England.

"Both the Department for Health and the Minister for Health should recognise that this is wholly unacceptable and commission abortion services without the delay and obstruction we have witnessed since the framework was introduced in April 2020."

Its reference to "women and pregnant people" is because the group believes that men (and "non-binary" people) can also get pregnant.
